HIGHWAY WORK TO BE BEGUN MONDAY

Governor Brumbaugh Orders That Start be Made---Telegraphs Hunter

LICENSE FUND IS AVAILABLE

On direct orders from Governor Brumbaugh, work on the state highways will begin Monday. The governor Friday sent a telegram to Joseph W. Hunter, first deputy commissioner, who is in charge of the department until the governor appoints a highway commissioner to succeed E. M. Bigelow, instructing him to proceed with the road work at once.

Plans for starting repair work on the roads had been worked out by Commissioner Bigelow some time ago and therefore the department is ready to proceed with the maintenance work at once. The governor believes now is the time to start the work as much can be accomplished before legislation can be worked out for general highway improvement.

The state treasury has over $700,000 in the motor vehicle license fund which is available for road improvement. The governor expects men to be at work in every county of the state Monday.

NO JINGOISM, STILL UNCLE SAM IS BUSY

Marine Corps Being Recruited—Office to be Opened in Charleroi at Postoffice Building Next Tuesday by Sergeant Campbell

No Mexican or any other kind of embroglio is anticipated in which Uncle Sam might engage, yet the United States Marine Corps is being recruited up to full strength. In line with this next Tuesday Sergeant A. S. Campbell, of the United States Marine Corps will open a recruiting office in a room set aside for him at the postoffice, where he will be from eight o'clock in the morning until three in the afternoon to receive applications for enlistment with the sea-soldiers.

Any young man of Charleroi or or vicinity, who has been hesitating over the choice of serving his country with either the land or naval forces, will have that problem s olved for him when Sergeant Campbell arrives. The marines serve either on board the battleships of the Atlantic fleet, the cruisers of the Pacific and Asiatic squadrons, or else on shore at our foreign stations in the Philippines, Guam and Honolulu, or at the home navy yards on both coasts. As the enlistment is for four years a marine has an excellent chance to serve both on shore and at sea, and for at least two years of his service to have either sea or foreign service without question. The age for enlistment in the Marine corps is the same as the army, from 18 to 35 years, and the pay is the same, except that marines receive 20 per cent additional pay while serving aboard s hip. In addition to the pay of $15 per month, the government make a liberal clothing allowance and furnishes subsistence, quarters and medical attendance. As the expenses are therefore confined to such incidentals as barber shop charges and tobacco, the greater part of the pay is "velvet." Applicants under 21 years must have the written consent of parents or guardians.

Sergeant Campbell, who is to be in charge of the work of recruiting locally is attached to the Pittsburg recruiting office. Those applicants who pass the preliminary examinations here will be furnished free government transportation to Pittsburg.

CINCINNATI TO PLAY OPENER AT PITTSBURG

Announcement Made of First Game of Season at Home With Pirates—Manager Clarke Has Promising Youngsters With This Year's Club

The Pirates will open their season at home this year on Thursday April 22, the Cincinnati Reds, with Manager Herzog, Tommy Leach and Charles Dooin in their lineup, being the visitors who will help blow the lid off at Forbes Field on that date. According to the war correspondents at the t raining camp, Manager Clarke has gathered about him this year a bunch of the fastest youngsters that has represented Pittsburg since Dreyfuss and Clarke came to the Smoky City back in 1900. Bobby Schang, Walter Gerber, Bill Hinchman, Douglass Baird, Raddy Siglin and Dan Costello have all shown up in great form and with Wagner, Gibson and Carey to steady them Forbes Field patrons are to be treated to some of the fastest, scrappiest baseball it has been their pleasure to witness since the halycon days of Clarke, Wagner and Leach, and local fans are up on their toes to get a peep at the new lineup in action. With the Cincinnati club stronger this season than it has been for many years, containing in its lineup such stars as Herzog, Leach and Dooin, the opener at Forbes Field should be one of the most interesting ever staged there. The opening game will be inaugurated with the usual ceremonies, President Tener of the National League being among the notables who will be present.

One of the novelties being offered Pittsburgers, and which will no doubt reach surrounding towns quickly, is a moving picture of the Pirates training trip. An enterprising movie operator from the Photoplay Entertainment company of Pittsburg followed the Buccaneers all the way from Pittsburg to Dawson Springs and then on to Hot Springs, and has secured films that are said to be the most complete ever taken of a big league club's training life. Medicine ball play, sliding pit drills, running bunting and the hundred and one other stunts that go to make up the practice work of a major league team are all c leverly shown by this movie film.

The Pittsburg Baseball club will as usual fill mail orders for the opening game.

Services Arranged in Commemoration of The Resurrection of Christ

MUSIC WILL BE A FEATURE

Special Programs to be Presented—Easter Millinery to be on Display, Weather Man Having Promised Sunshine and Warmth.

One of the most glorious religious festivals of the year will be observed tomorrow in the churches of Charleroi and all churches of Christendom in commemoration of the resurrection of Christ. In all local churches elaborate programs have been arranged. Special Easter music and special Easter sermons will feature the general observance.

Representing as it does hope to Christendom, the date marks too virtually the beginning of spring from a millinery point of view. Easter this year comes earlier than it did last, but balmy spring weather is promised by the weather man in unusual contrast with the prediction of last year. The result it is expected will be a display of finery in unaccustomed brilliancy.

The eastertide observance virtually s tarted on Holy Thursday. Solemn services were held on both Thursday and Friday and at some churches this morning also, leading up to the Easter celebration.

Not a church is there but what has prepared a special program of music. Among the most elaborate celebrations will be that at St. Jerome's Catholic church where the resurrection will be celebrated with mass at 7:30, 9 and 10:30 in the morning. At the 10:30 o'clock mass a male choir under the direction of Edward Wheeler will render music. At St. Mary's Episcopal church a special musical program will be rendered at 11 o'clock. At the First Presbyterian church the evening service at 7:30 will be given up to scriptural story and song. A song service will be given at Christ Lutheran church in the evening. There will be special Easter music at the Methodist Episcopal church at the morning and evening services. There will be special m usic at the Baptist church and baptism morning and evening. The special musical service at the Washington Avenue Presbyterian church will be given in the evening, when music from old masters will be rendered. Special Easter music will be rendered at all the services at the First Christian churchh.

First Presbyterian.

Sunday school at 9:45. Morning service at 11 at which time the sacraments of baptism and the Lord's supper will be administered and new members received. Junior endeavor at 3. Senior endeavor at 6:30. At 7:30 the choir, assisted by the pastor will give a scriptural Easter service in story and song. The story is arranged by S. Trevena and Jackson and the music consisting of solos, duets and choruses is by several favorite composers. All are invited. Rev. A. J. Whipkey, pastor.

AVOID THE NASTY MIND.

Do you have a nasty mind? If you are habitually attributing unworthy motives to others, you have.

The nasty mind affects us very much as it does an unclean person, exciting in us repulsion and a strong desire to escape its contact, says the New Castle News. It is usually found in those whose opinions are formed not by reason and intelligent weighing of evidence, but by prejudice and blind feeling. Such people fall into ruts of opinion because it is easier than thinking. To condemn a class requires less exertion than to do justice to an individual. Hence, whosoever wants a clean mind should avoid class condemnation.

For instance, there are certain circles in which you are pretty sure to hear all of the clergy, all church members, all reformers set down as hypocrites. It is a nasty habit of some to refer to all congressmen, senators and office holders as corrupt and venal, all policemen as for sale or brutal or incompetent, all newspapers as under the control of the business office, all Socialists and labor unions as anarchists and bomb makers, all people of wealth as heartless, and all successful business men as criminals.

Violent and sweeping denunciations attract attention. The world eagerly listens to scandals and muckrakings. We have seen nastiness in the senate of the United States where politicians accuse rival leaders of sordid motives. We have seen nastiness in the pulpit, especially from the lips of popular evangelists, where those are fiercely condemned whose social customs do not conform to the rules of a sect or group of sects.

Bear in mind that all actors are not loose in morals, that all Jews are not cross and greedy, that all Germans are not swinish, and all Englishmen are not egotistic, that every woman does not have her price, that all lawyers are not dishonest, that all who drink are not drunkards, that all who play cards are not gamblers and that all physicians are not fakers. People who do not bear these things in mind usually have made vicious generalizations formed from one or two instances that have come under their observations. Even in the criminal class and in prisons, few are bad at all times.

You would do well to keep in mind the saying of Epictetus:

"Bear a gentle mind toward any man who may revile you. For say on each occasion: So it appeared to him."

NO JINGOISM.

Uncle Sam is trying mighty hard to keep free from any entanglement with any country, and getting thin doing it. Jingoism isn't popular in this land since war's realities have been realized by observation of affairs abroad.

A year or more ago the United States could have been plunged into a desolating war with Mexico, and the people would have cheered. But today the average American deplores war and detests war talk. It wouldn't be such an easy matter to scare up a few regiments to wipe the earth of greasers.

We might whip the Mexicans into submission after so long a time at tremendous cost and the sacrifice of thousands of lives, but then only the merest start would be made and the same process of evolution would have to be gone through that will be gone through no matter who governs.

There is hope for Mexico's ultimate salvation, but in the furtherance of that utopian condition there is doubt as to the efficacy of war waged by the United States in a presumed role of savior.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

Professor Warren M. Beidler, of Bethel, Penn., in a recent address made the striking assertion that the American people—money mad—taught their children how to earn a living, but not how to live.

"There is no viler and also no vainer, ambition," said Professor Beidler to a reporter, "than that of the American boy to become a millionaire. What percentage of our boys do become millionaires? It would take a good many decimals to work that out, believe me.

"The boy sets his heart on a million fares like the washerwoman who set her heart on the cross-eyed aeronaut.

"I hear you married that cross-eyed aeronaut last week," said a friend.

"'Yes, I did,' replied the washerwoman, as she rocked back and forth over her tub. 'Yes, I married him and I give him $600 out of my buildin' association to start an airship factory.'

"'That so?' said the friend. 'Where is he now?'

"'I don't know,' said the washerwoman. 'I'm waitin for him to come back from his honeymoon.'"

She was a lady visitor to the prison, kindly and well meaning and as she chattered with a burglar who had been sentenced to six months' imprisonment, she thought she detected signs of reform in him. "And now," she said, "have you any plans for the future on the expiration of your sentence?"

"Oh, yes ma'am," he said, hopefully. "I've got the plans of two banks and a postoffice."

COUNTY CONTROLLER HAS HIGHLY PRIZED RELIC

County Controller T. J. Underwood is the proud possessor of a unique relic and souvenir in the shape of a horse shoe made from a piece of angle iron from the battleship Maine and it is probably the only thing of the kind in existence. The iron was secured by him in November, 1910 during his visit to Cuba.

At that time the United States government was engaged in raising the battleship and c offer dams were being constructed. A piece of iron several feet long was secured but the action of the salt water had decayed the metal to such an extent that there was barely enough for the horse shoe when it was given to the blacksmith to make.

The horse shoe was made by Edwin P. Brownlee of Washington and is a work of art. It is very highly polished and the inscription "T. J. Underwood, Battleship Maine," is engraved upon it.

A CUP OF COFFEE.

It Has No Value as Food, but It Has a Stimulating Effect.

The infusion of coffee presents practically very little material that is of direct nourishing value, says a writer in the London Tablet, but by diminishing nervous fatigue, by virtue chiefly of the caffeine present, it may increase muscular power. It is not itself a builder of tissue. The use of coffee after dinner, it is of interest to note, is justified in a large number of cases by the fact of its stimulating effect upon the vital centers, and it is said to serve to some extent as an antidote to alcohol.

It is commonly claimed to remove drowsiness. As a matter of fact, in many subjects it produces drowsiness, but this is usually followed by marked wakefulness. The practice of drinking coffee after a meal for the sake of the stimulus which is experienced has much to be said in its favor dietetically.

There is no reason for supposing that coffee possesses any value as a food. The berry contains a quite important proportion of fatty substances (12 per cent average), but these are necessarily excluded from the infusion, as, owing to their insolubility, they remain in the "grounds."

According to our analysis, the protein contents of a cup of coffee are small, approximating to 1.25 per cent of the coffee extracted. This amount can have little dietetic significance. There is also a trifling quantity of sugar present, besides traces of alcohol, which again can possess no importance from a physiological point of view.

WOOD FOR VIOLINS.

Maple Is the Best and Is What the Old World Famed Makers Used.

In the finest violins the body is made of white maple. In cheap ones violet ebony is used. In medium priced ones alternate leaves of the two are employed. The best wood of all is that of the epicea, a tree resembling a fir in general appearance, which grows in central and northern Europe, but musical instrument makers set special value on that from the Vosges mountains. Its wood is most homogeneous and has the advantage over all others that there is scarcely any difference between the sap wood and the heart.

Violet ebony, which comes from Brazil, Africa and India, is much used for pianos. True ebony is now so expensive that it is reserved for nuts and twisters.

Sycamore maple, somewhat less homogeneous than white maple and hence less sonorous, is employed chiefly in making mandolins.

The wood of trees from high altitudes and a severe climate is much better than that from plains and warmer countries for all purposes in which sonority is desired. And it should have had not less than 200 or 300 years of growth, and its concentric circles should be no more than two or three millimeters apart.

The ancient violin makers, Stradivarius, Amati, Guarnerius and the others, used the finest and best seasoned maple, and this, with their perfect varnish, is why their violins have lasted so long.—New York World.

The Seven Wise Men of Greece.

The seven wise men of Greece were Thales of Miletus, Periander of Corinth, Cleobulus of Lyndus, Chilon of Lacedaemon, Solon of Athens, Bias of Prienne and Pittacus of Mitylene. Some fishermen of Miletus sold a draft of fishes to a bystander. When the net was drawn in it contained a golden tripod, and the purchaser claimed it was his, while the fishermen contended that they sold only the fish that might be in the net. The dispute was referred to the oracle of Delphi, who awarded the tripod to the wisest man in Greece. Thereupon it was taken to Thales, who declined it and suggested that it be given to Bias. He in turn refused to accept it, and thus it was successively declined by all the seven, and they were thereafter known as the seven wise men of Greece.

Beltane.

In the highlands of Scotland and in Ireland May 1 was called Beltane. This was the name of an ancient pagan festival, traces of which have survived to this day. The name is still used for May day in Gaelic Scotland. It is said that the druids on that day used to make two fires with great incantations and drive their cattle between them as a safeguard against disease.

The Borrower Bit.

A theatrical manager asked an author-actor down to a watering resort as his guest from Saturday to Monday. The actor accepted with alacrity and went down with the full intention of borrowing $500 from the manager before he returned to London. The time passed very quickly, however, and the would be borrower kept putting off the evil moment, hoping for a more favorable opportunity to prefer his request. When Sunday night came he decided to leave it till they were returning to town together. They seemed to be getting on so nicely that he did not wish to spoil it.

What was his horror and consternation when next morning, in answer to his inquiry for his host, the waiter said:

"He left, sir, by the early train for town and said I was to give you this note."

The letter ran as follows:

"Dear Old Chap—Had to leave early. Kindly pay the bill and let me know what I owe you when we meet in town.—Yours, I."—London Mail.

Couldn't Face Failure.

In 1782 James Price, a distinguished amateur chemist and fellow of the British Royal society, announced that he had succeeded in inventing a method of converting mercury and other inferior metals into gold and silver. He conducted a series of experiments in the presence of a number of men of rank and science which were apparently successful. Some of the gold thus produced was presented to the king, and the University of Oxford, hearing of this, immediately conferred on Price the honorary degree of M. D. But a fierce controversy arose, and he was requested to prove the truth of his discovery before the Royal society. He assented, and on the appointed day the critics assembled at his house. He received them cordially, and then, stepping to one side, he swallowed a flask of laurel water and died in a few moments. He had, it is thought, made a mistake in his experiments and had not the moral courage to own it.—London Standard.

Genuine Wit.

Benjamin Moore, the second bishop of New York, was a man noted in his day for his ready wit—a quality that his wife apparently shared with him. A dinner was given by some one of Gouverneur Morris' friends when he was about to depart for Europe. Bishop Moore and his wife were of the party. In the course of the conversation Mr. Morris observed that since he was going abroad he had made his will and, turning to Bishop Moore, said to him:

"My reverend friend, I have bequeathed to you my complete stock of impudence."

Bishop Moore replied: "Sir, you are not only very kind, but you are very generous. You have left me by far the largest portion of your estate."

Mrs. Moore immediately added: "My dear, you have come into possession of your inheritance remarkably soon."—Youth's Companion.

MADE HIM A PROFESSOR.

He Didn't Know Very Much, but His Bluff Won the Appointment.

In one of the Japanese papers are some reminiscences of the war with Russia, and among them is the following:

When peace was concluded between Japan and Russia the study of the Japanese language became something like a craze among Russians. At Harbin, for instance, Japanese were in great demand as teachers of their mother tongue. Many Japanese barbers and laundrymen shut up their shops and became instructors of Japanese.

As in most cases the instruction was not conducted on a systematic method, many Russian students of Japanese only succeeded in acquiring a smattering of the language.

Then one day a Japanese interpreter who taught Japanese to Russian railway men at Harbin received a letter from one of his whilom pupils asking for a certificate of his proficiency. As a matter of fact, his knowledge of Japanese does not extend beyond what may be called pidgin Japanese, but a certificate was forwarded to him as requested.

A few weeks later the interpreter was surprised to receive a letter from the Russian informing him that he had been engaged by the government as professor of Japanese at a monthly salary of 500 roubles.—Japanese Chronicle.

SEEK THE BRIGHT SPOTS.

Don't Grouch in the Gloom, but Look Up and Be an Optimist.

He who thinks the world is full of good people and kindly blessings is much richer than he who thinks the contrary. Each man's imagination largely peoples the world for himself. Some live in a world peopled with princes of the royal blood; some in a world of paupers and privation. You have your choice.

This is a big, busy world. It cares precious little what you think of it or what faults or troubles you find in it. It is a choice that concerns yourself more than all others combined whether you grouch in the gloom, the companion of hateful goblins, or stride in the sunshine, seeing smiles and catching shreds of song.

Men and women in God's image were not made as whining, groveling beings. They were made to stand erect, mentally as well as physically; to labor well and joyously; to take the gifts or providence, whether they be joy or sorrow, and bear them cheerfully and with courage; to add ever something to the world's store of happiness, if it be only a smile.

Look up! See how flooded with sunshine this beautiful world is when faced with smiling eyes.

If you would win anything, do anything, be anything, don't whine.—Christian Herald.

A Tartar Courtship.

Among the Tchulian Tartars a curious mode of "popping the question" exists. The Tchulian bachelor in search of a wife, having filled a brand new pipe with fragrant tobacco, stealthily enters the dwelling of the fair one upon whom he has bestowed his affections, deposits the pipe upon a conspicuous article of furniture and retires on tiptoe to some convenient hiding place in the neighborhood, local etiquette requiring that he should execute this strategic movement apparently undetected by the damsel of his choice or any other member of her family. Presently he returns without further affectation of secrecy and looks into the apartment in a casual sort of way. A single glance at the pipe he left behind him enables him to learn the fate of his proposal. If it has been smoked he goes forth an accepted and exultant bridegroom; if not, the offer of his hand and heart has been rejected.

No Business Good Business.

"Yes," said the quiet man, "business has been good with me this week—or bad—I don't know which you would call it. I have been busier than the company likes to have me."

"What do you mean by that? Is there an employer who does not like to have his employees work? Could I get a job there? It seems to me that such a position would suit my temperament exactly."

"The company doesn't care to have anything doing in my department. If would be glad to pay me my salary and never have me do a stroke of work."

"What an ideal job! What kind of a place is it?"

"I am an adjuster of death claims for a life insurance company."—New York Press.

Sandy's Advice.

At a time when the Scots had considerably less love for their southern neighbors than in these days a father, taking leave of his son, said: "Sandy, ma bairn, ye're aboot tae gang up tae London. Tak' a' th' siller ye can frae the English—ta' everything ye can frae them. But mind ye, Sandy, they're a braw fechtin' people, so be careful wi' them. Never fecht a bald mon, fer ye canna catch him by th' hair."—Argonaut.

It Makes a Difference.

In Lever's "Charles O'Malley" the hero's boast while on his way to a duel, "I can break the stem of a wineglass at fifteen paces," was met by his friend and mentor with the comment "Yes, but the wineglass hasn't a pistol in its hand."

Sensible men show their sense by saying much in few words.—Franklin.

Tenniel's Mustache.

The later portraits of Sir John Tenniel, the famous cartoonist of London Punch, show him wearing a full beard and mustache, but his most familiar appearance was with a mustache only, a long and curly specimen, worthy of one of Ouida's guardsmen. The story of how he came to grow it is interesting.

After the Crimean war the return of the soldiers with full beards started a fashion against which three Punch artists protested. One day, being out on horseback together, they solemnly halted at crossroads and swore on their uplifted hunting crops never to wear hair on lip or chin. Tenniel was one of the party, Leech another and H. T. Pritchett the third.

Leech alone remained true to the vow. Pritchett went to Skye, and on his return with a mustache called on Tenniel. He thrust his head in at the cartoonist's door and dumbly waited. "You scoundrel!" was Tenniel's exclamation. "Then I, too, must!" And he did.

He Ought to Know.

Lady—I should like to look at a flat which I see is for rent in this building, but no one has answered my bell.

Man—I'll show it to you. Right this way, mum.

"Well, this is something like it. The rooms will suit, I'm sure. What sort of a janitor have they here?"

"The very best in the city, mum."

"Obliging?"

"The kindest hearted gentleman to be found anywhere, mum."

"Honest?"

"As the day is long, mum."

"Is he attentive to his duties?"

"He's just workin' himself to death, mum. Always thinkin' up some new thing to make folks comfortable."

"Well, I declare! I wouldn't lose this flat for the world. Where is the janitor now?"

"I'm him, mum."—Kansas City Star.

The Green Flames.

The greatest discovery of borax ever made was the result of the purest chance. A number of years ago a man named Aaron Winters was prospecting for gold or other precious metals in that American inferno known as Death valley. He had his wife with him, and they two worked together until their provisions were at an end; then, bitterly disappointed at their ill success, they started back toward civilization. The first night they camped in Ash valley. Here they lit a fire and prepared to cook their supper. Mrs. Winters called her husband's attention to the peculiar green tinge of the flames. He did not speak, but with shaking hands scratched away the earth and suddenly shouted: "We're rich, Rose; we're rich! It's borax!" He was right. They subsequently sold their claim for a very large sum.

British Field Marshals.

A British field marshal never retires from the army. He may be placed on half pay, but is still borne on the active list. By the regulations there must not be more than eight field marshals receiving pay as such—that is, exclusive of honorary field marshals, such as foreign kings, emperors and princes. Of the eight regular field marshals two must be selected from the Indian army. The position of field marshal is a great one. The field marshal commanding in chief in the Mediterranean gets £5,000 a year. Probably a field marshal actively employed will get at least £3,000 a year. This is better than the pay of an admiral of the fleet, who may be said to be a naval field marshal, and gets only a little over £2,000 a year, exclusive of allowances.—Ireland's Own.

Napoleon's Name.

A Greek scholar called attention to a very curious coincidence about the name of Napoleon. If you take away the first letter of his name you have "apoleon;" take away the first letter of that word and you have "poleon;" do this successively down to the last syllable, and you have "leon," "eon" and "on." Put these several words together in this order, Napoleon on oleon leon eon apoleon poleon, and you have a Greek phrase the literal translation of which is "Napoleon, being the lion of peoples, went about destroying cities."—Exchange.

The Dear Girls.

"I don't like my new gown very well," said the young lady recently. "The material is awfully pretty and the style is all right, but it needs something to improve the shape of it."

"Why," suggested her dearest friend, "don't you let some other girl wear it?"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Not an Admirer.

"Your husband loves horses, doesn't he?"

"No," replied young Mrs. Torkins.

"But he is always going to the races."

"Yes. But the way he talks about the horses after he gets home is something dreadful."—Washington Star.

BRAWNY NORWEGIANS.

They Are the Longest Lived People in the World Today.

The fine stature and unique physical qualities of the athletic Norsemen are thus described by Price Collier in an article on "Norway and the Norwegians, From an American Point of View," in Scribner's Magazine:

"The so called bonder, or agricultural peasantry, form the very backbone of the nation in Norway. Each is proprietor of his own farm, and they occupy the country from the shore of the sea to the foot of the hills and up every glen or valley as far as corn will grow. They are, as a rule, fine looking, athletic men, as their properties are not so large as to exempt them from work, but large enough to supply them and their families with wholesome food. In the old days they built their own houses, made their own furniture, plows, carts, harness, ironwork, woodwork and basketwork. Probably there are no communities anywhere else in the world so self efficient, so independent and so comfortable.

"Indeed, their size and wholesome aspect prove this, for they are the fairest, tallest, broadest chested and longest lived people in the world today.

"In the streets of the towns, at the farms, on the roads, one seldom sees a fat man or one who looks unwieldy. They are sturdily, sometimes heavily, built, but they are lean in the flank, broad of shoulder and thick through, and, though they do not always carry themselves lightly or gracefully, they look to have plenty of room for the working machinery of living, for heart and lungs and digestive apparatus. Wherever you go in Norway, from Christiansand to the North cape, you cannot go far without going up and down hill, nor can you go far without inhaling the champagne-like mountain air. It is not impossible that the plain food—a necessity in a poor country—the physical training in the schools, the obligatory military training, the sensible temperance legislation, the up and down hill exercise, the almost entire lack of luxury and the fact that they are not hard workers—not lazy, perhaps, but certainly leisurely in their toil, seldom making any undue demand upon their nervous energy—have produced what no artificial legislation can copy."

Napoleon and Rousseau.

Napoleon on visiting the tomb of Rousseau said:

"It would have been better for the repose of France that this man had never been born."

"Why so, Citizen Consul?"

"It is he who prepared the French revolution."

"I should have thought, Citizen Consul, that it was not for you to complain of the revolution."

"Well," replied Napoleon, "the future will discover whether it was not better for the repose of the world that neither Rousseau nor I had ever been born."

In these words we hear the first clarion of advancing Imperialism.—"The Personality of Napoleon," J. Holland Rose.

The Origin of "Hurrah."

The word "hurrah" is pure Slavonian and is commonly heard from the coast of Dalmatia to Bering strait when any of the population living within these limits is called on to give proof of courage and valor. The origin of the word belongs to the primitive idea that every man that dies heroically for his country goes straight to heaven—Hu-ray, to paradise—and in the shock and ardor of battle the combatants utter that cry, as the Turks do that of "Allah!" each animating himself by the certitude of immediate recompense to forget earth and to contemn death.

How Indians Purified Water.

The Indians had a way of purifying water from a pond or swamp by digging a hole about a foot across and down about six inches below the water level a few feet from the pond. After it was filled with water they bailed it out quickly, repeating the bailing process about three times. After the third bailing the hole would be filled with filtered water. Try it.—Boy Scout Handbook.

Why Corn Has Silk.

A Potato Hill man who is sixty-one years old never knew until recently that for every grain on an ear of corn there is a silk running out to the end to light and moisture. These silks run back under the husk. One is attached to each grain on the cob and nourishes it. Everything in nature is more wonderful than any invented story.—Potato Hill Cor. in Atchison Globe.

Culture's Progress.

"Our daughter is studying French, German, music, dancing and painting," said the fond mother complacently.

"Well," replied Mr. Cumrox, "that's a good start. But has she yet learned not to use back number slang and chew gum?"—Washington Star.

No Longer Company.

"Familiarity breeds contempt."

"True. When I was first invited over to their house to dinner they used to let the dishes go until morning; now they do them right after dinner and call me into the kitchen to help."—Detroit Free Press.

Volcanoes in New Zealand.

New Zealand's volcanic phenomena are accounted for in the Maori legends in the following manner: One of the first chiefs to reach New Zealand from the ancient home in Hawaiki brought with him a trusted follower, Ngauruhoe, with whom he set out to examine the country. When they reached the highest peak they suffered much from cold, and the chief shouted to his sisters on a far distant island to send some of the fire which had been brought in canoes from Hawaiki. This fire immediately came in a southwesterly line, subterraneously bursting forth on the summit where the chief and his follower sat freezing. It arrived in time to save the life of the former, but not that of Ngauruhoe, whose name is commemorated in the highest peak of the Tongariro mountains. Geysers, hot springs and fumaroles mark the course of the subterranean passage. Mount Egmont stands in solitary grandeur because he, as one of the three giants, quarreled with the other two, Tongariro and Ruapehu, and had to fly to the coast to escape their wrath.

America Not So Big.

On the steamer off the west coast of Africa I picked up an acquaintance with an Englishman who had come aboard somewhere along the Gold Coast. After the usual commonplaces he drawled, "You are an American?"

I admitted the soft impeachment.

"Did you ever meet an Englishman over there named Jessup?" was his next query.

I always take Englishmen seriously, so instead of rolling my eyes and explaining what a large country America is, I told him the truth about all the Jessups I happened to know. There were only two—one was a steel agent in New York city and the other was a Y. M. C. A. secretary in Summit, N. J.

"That's the chap," said the Briton, unexpectedly. "He used to live next door to me in Birmingham."

And he did, you know. And I couldn't keep up my pretense that America was a big country after that.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Eugene Field and Children.

"It was children whom Field loved best," says Miss Hildegarde Hawthorne in St. Nicholas, "and he would take all sorts of trouble to make a child happy. His room was crowded with toys, queer dolls, funny little mechanical toys that ran about or bowed or nodded strange heads or performed tricks. His study door was never shut to a child, and he had many child friends his family knew nothing of. His brother tells how a few hours after his death a little crippled boy came to the door and asked if he might go up and see Mr. Field. He was taken into the room where the gentle, much loved figure lay and left there. In a little while he came limping downstairs, the tears streaming down his cheeks, and went silently away, known to nobody there."

No Explanations Needed.

The lady jury was out longer than the importance of the case would warrant.

The judge grew impatient.

"What's the trouble in there?" he said to the bailiff.

"I'll see," replied the bailiff.

"Hold on," cried the judge. "Tell 'em if there's any knotty points about the case that bother them they should appeal to me."

"Yes, your honor."

The bailiff goes to the door of the jury room and returns.

"Well?"

"They ain't got to the case yet, your honor. They're still discussin' th plaintiff's clothes."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The High Seas.

The "high seas" is a term signifying the entire marine expanse, so far as it is not the exclusive property of any particular country. The rule of international law is that every country bordering on the sea has the exclusive sovereignty over such sea to the extent of three miles from its shore, but all beyond and which is not within three miles of some other country is open or common to all countries.

His First Case.

"How so?"

DEFIED THE BRAHMANS.

An East Indian Prince Who Did Not Fear Losing Caste.

Mr. Coningsby Dawson, the well known English writer, tells the following anecdote of the East Indian prince Sir Pertab Singh:

A young English lieutenant had died of cholera in his palace. The boy was the son of an English friend. When the body had to be carried out to be placed on a gun carriage Sir Pertab Singh went forward to lift it up. Before he touched it he was stopped by some English officers. They reminded him that, by his religion, were he to touch the dead he would lose all his caste and perhaps, despite his wealth, never be able to buy it back. They advised him to send for the sweepers, who are outcasts. In spite of their protests he picked up the body and carried it down the palace steps to the gun carriage.

A gasp went up at the sight. Every one of his subjects knew what he had done. The next morning, when he rose, 500 Brahman priests were waiting in the courtyard. He came out, a proud figure, to face them. He knew what they had come for—to make him the lowest thing in India, a man without caste. He asked them what was their errand, and they told him. They had come to make him of as little account as the humblest sweeper in his palace.

Sir Pertab Singh laughed. "I be long," he said, "to a higher caste than any of you have ever dreamed of, and you can't take it from me; you're welcome to all the rest. I belong to the same caste as the dead son of my friend—the caste of a soldier."

With that he walked back into his palace, and the Brahman priests went away, one by one, ashamed and puzzled.

Quill Pens.

The quill pen is not quite extinct in London. The legal profession, which is very conservative, clings to it tenaciously, and none of the courts would be completely equipped without a plentiful supply of good goose quills. Have you noticed what an indispensable accessory the quill is to counsel, whether in ostentatiously taking a note, making a speech or in helping to point a warning finger at a hostile witness?—London Standard.

By Internal Evidence.

"Where do you suppose we got the saying, 'He laughs best who laughs last?'" asked Mrs. Binks of her husband.

"Probably some Englishman first said it," replied Mr. Binks. "He was doubtless trying to set a national failing in a favorable light."—Youth's Companion.

Food For Gossip.

"Where are you going?"

"To call on Mrs. Wallaby-Wombat. Better come along. I understand there are some very interesting things to be heard."

"How so?"

"She has just quarreled with her best friend."—Pittsburgh Post.

HITCHES HIS LINOTYPE MACHINE TO HIS BICYCLE

Editor George A. Anderson Adopts Unusual Method of Operating Machinery When Electric Power Fails.

Though many men of brilliant minds have hitched their wagons to a star, figuratively speaking, it remained for George A. Anderson, editor and manager of the Monongahela Times this week to hitch his linotype machine to a bicycle. It worked.

"Ordinarly," George remarks in telling about it, "electricity is necessary to turn out the little leaden slugs of thought, but under the stress of circumstances a bicycle and human motive power superceded Ben Franklin's juice."

The way it happened was this: Electric power was shut off from some peculiar cause. That threw the linotype machine out of commission. George looked at that machine once and a mrilliant idea struck him. Within a few minutes he had hired a bicycle, hitched it on, hired a boy to pedal and the "little leaden slugs of thought" were again things of reality. The Times was on time.

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W, Notre Dame, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.
